

So yeah, yesterday was a very humbling experience, it all started when i got to school, i forgot to tie my shoelaces AGAIN and I tripped up the stairs! How does one do that?! And one of the boys from my class was behind me and teased me the entire day, fast forward to third period, it was art class and while we were walking I accidentally stepped on the teachers foot but acted like nothing happened but that isn't all I bumped into someone and it was this girl I absolutely hate with all the passion in my heart and she knew it too let's call her hmmm.. Terror! Yes! Because she isn't scary but is a terrifying sight.. she always has this smug smirk on her face and she thinks she's better than everyone else, she used to be my best friend but she was really overdramatic all because of one fight we stopped being friends but that's not the point! She said "hey? You need a little help?" She reached her hand out but my friend let's call her Sana helped me up instead and Terror just kept on smirking at me, it was so embarrassing! "Oh my god!! That's the ex bff you were telling me about? Ewww! She looks so obnoxious!!" Sana whispered in my ear. "I know!! I don't know why we were ever friends..". Afterwards, It was lunch time and guess who we ran into again TERROR, like what are the odds? She was definitely taunting me but you know I didn't let that slide, I decided to mess with her head, obviously she knows that I hate her, but I decided to flip the switch and act super nice towards her! I would smile, and wave every time she would look at me and I felt so much satisfaction seeing that smug expression fall from her face, but I guess karma hit me back because when we went to the mall we didn't only see Terror there we also saw Sana's old crush nightmare together! And it was just so embarrassing for both of us. We just tried to ignore them and continue shopping but they kept following us, when we walked into H&M they were there looking at us and taunting us, we went to the food court and they were still following! The whole day was ruined so me and Sana just left to go to her house and hang out there. "Ugh! What are the odds Lara! We not only see terror we see nightmare too! It's like there teaming up against us to taunt us!" She exclaimed, "maybe they're stalking us, they both definitely don't like us so why wouldn't they team up and do this?" I replied "that's literally what I just said!" Afterwards when I left Sana's house I was on my way but stopped at a small supermarket to buy something to eat or drink and I see this really cute guy, only to embarrass myself in front of him, I not only stumbled, I stuttered and could get my sentences out clearly, so I just gave up. But yeah that was my very VERY humbling and embarrassing day