Humorous recount

The most embarrassing day

It all started when I woke up late on a showery morning because I forgot to set the alarm so I missed the bus and had to run to school. On my way to the school it started to cloud burst and unfortunately I had to enter the classroom drenched and late.

When it was the time to leave school, I forgot to notify my parents to inform the school that I was going to amble home, luckily the school ended up calling my parents and I was authorized to leave the school. On my way home, a fast car drove into the puddle next to me and splashed me with the dirty water.

Finally I reached my house and while I was opening the door I realized that my parents are home with guests and I had to make up an excuse to change my clothes then greet them. Unfortunately I didn't have enough time to make up an excuse so I was forced to go greet them with my dirty clothes.

As I was wearing my clothes after the shower I took, my friend that I had not contacted for almost two months called me and I wore my clothes as fast as I can but I forgot to comb my messy, damp hair and by accident I opened my camera. By the time I perceived that my hair is messy and damp the damage that it made could not be repaired.

Two hours later my relatives were coming to visit us from America, as I was helping them with there bags of goods after I hugged and kissed them I tripped from the stairs and accidentally broke one of there goods and I injured my hand and leg and I broke my thumb.
